INTRODUCTION.

THE following Lists of the Nobility, Gentry, and others, who contributed to the Defence of this Country in 1588, at the time of the Spanish Invasion, are taken from a manuscript written in that year, and are now laid before the public, to point out the dangers which threaten us, and to stimulate our fellow subjects at this awful crisis, to follow the example of their ancestors, by uniting for the defence of our Religion, Laws, Liberties and Property, and whatever may be considered as valuable to Englishmen, against inveterate foes, who seek the destruction of our happy Constitution. United, we need not fear the perfidious arts, the machinations, the force, nor even the diabolical principles of our malignant enemies. It is a debt of gratitude which we owe to our predecessors, to mention a few particulars concerning the spirited conduct of Queen Elizabeth, her ministers and people, on that formidable Invasion.

The Queen fitted out a Fleet with so much expedition, that though her preparations were begun but about the 1st of Novr. 1587, yet her ships were ready to put to Sea on the 28th of Decr. following, under the command of Charles Lord Howard of Effingham, High Admiral of England. For land service, there were disposed about the Southern Coasts of England, twenty thousand men; besides which, two armies of well disciplined troops, one under the command of Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, was encamped at Tilbury, for the safeguard of the City of London; the other army, under the command of Henry Carey, Lord Hunsdon, consisted of thirty-four thousand foot, and two thousand horse, was destined to guard the Queen's person. Her officers, civil and military, advised, that Milford Haven, Falmouth, Plymouth, Portland, the Isle of Wight, Portsmouth, the open Coast of Kent called the Downs, the Thames Mouth, Harwich, Yarmouth, Hull, &c. should be well manned and fortified. That the train-bands all along the maritime counties should meet in arms, on signals given, to defend the said ports, to prevent the enemies landing, and in case of their debarkation, that they should lay all the country waste round about, and leave neither booty nor forage for them; that they should annoy them night and day, so as to give them no rest, but not hazard a battle, till they were joined by a sufficient force. The Queen also wrote letters to the chief of her subjects who lay near the sea-coasts, acquainting them, that she expected on that extraordinary occasion, a larger proportion both of horse and foot to be raised, and the number she required, to be certified to her Privy Council.

Letters were also addressed from the Lords of the Council, by the Queen's command, to the nobility and others in the several counties, to provide themselves, their servants, and dependants, with horses and armour, to be ready to act upon summons for the defence of her person.

She also directed letters to Sir Francis Walsingham, Knight, Keeper of the Privy Seal, reciting, "that for the better withstanding of the intended invasion of this Realme

“the like was never prepared yet anie time against this Realme.”
Commanding him to signify to the Lieutenant of each County, that Her Majesty required from her loving subjects, an extraordinary aid, by way of loan, for the defence of the Country.

The manuscript gives an account of the money raised in each County in consequence of this requisition, which is valuable, because it contains the names of the nobility, gentry, and persons of property, who flourished upwards of two centuries ago, and although the sums may at this day appear small, they were in fact great, when we consider the difference in the value of money, between that time and the present. It may be proper to observe that the persons mentioned in the following lists were but a small part of those who manifested their zeal and love for their country on this occasion, for the Cities, Towns and Villages, the Cinque Ports, and all other Havens of England, were unanimous in their exertions on this emergency.

The City of London in particular, being requested by the Privy Council to find five thousand men, and fifteen ships, they willingly and cheerfully furnished thirty ships, provided with all necessaries, and ten thousand able men, well armed and trained; besides which, they kept in readiness thirty thousand men more, prepared to march wherever there should be occasion; and also lent the Queen fifty-one thousand, nine hundred pounds, in ready money.

As to the rest of the nation, when it was reported, that the Spanish Fleet appeared in the Channel, many of the nobility and gentry repaired to London for the defence of the Queen's person, bringing with them about five thousand horsemen, which were maintained at their private expence, till the Spanish Navy was known to have passed beyond Scotland.

In short, a spirit of unanimity pervaded the whole nation, all ranks of persons concurred in being ready to serve for the defence of the Country; Catholics and Protestants united with equal zeal in the common cause, and some Counties brought into the field twenty thousand, and others even forty thousand able fighting men. The Maritime Counties, in particular on the South and East parts of England, from Cornwall to Lincolnshire, were so well furnished with a stout and well regulated militia, that there was no place for an enemies landing, which could not be resorted to within forty-eight hours, by upwards of twenty thousand fighting men, with ordnance and other necessary provisions, and as a further security, several of the disaffected were imprisoned in the Isle of Ely.

A great many of the young nobility and gentry entered themselves as volunteers in the navy, hired ships at their own expence, and from a zeal to serve their country, joined the Grand Fleet in vast numbers; among which, were the Earls of Oxford, Northumberland and Cumberland, the Lord Dudley, Sir Thomas, Sir Robert and William Cecil, Sir Henry Brooke, Sir William Hatton, Sir Charles Blount, Sir Walter Rawleigh, Sir Robert Carey, Sir Anthony Willoughby, Sir Thomas Vavasour, Sir Horatio Pallavicini, Thos. Gerard, Henry Nowell, Edward Darcy, Thomas Woodhouse, William Harvey, Arthur Gorges, and others. And at the same time the Justices of the Peace in the Maritime Counties, as also the Earl of Suffex, Sir George Carey, and the captains of the forts and castles along the sea coasts, sent ships, men, powder, shot, victuals, and all kind of provisions, for the relief and assistance of the main Fleet.

SUCH was the spirited and magnanimous conduct of our ancestors, for the defence of all that was dear to them; let us reflect what a debt we owe them, and let us resolve to pay it, by transmitting down to our posterity our happy Constitution, and all those rights which we inherit as Britons; thus shall we continue to flourish, the pride and envy of all surrounding nations.

ON THE CONTRARY, were we not to resist our determined and inveterate enemies, who have ravaged and plundered a great part of Europe, and who as their greatest exploit prepare to invade and subdue this Island, in order not merely to ravage and plunder, but to destroy our existence as an independent country, should they succeed, we should see our Towns and Villages, our Granaries and Warehouses, and in short, all our property plundered and ransacked by ferocious invaders, whose aim and wish is, to annihilate Great Britain as a nation; which cruel and wicked designs, should they effect, we should be compelled to submit to the brutal rage of these unprincipled monsters to feed their insatiable thirst for plunder, with the earnings of our industry; to look on, incapable of resistance, whilst they are actively employed in the subversion of our Government, Constitution, Laws and Liberties, while they are destroying at once, all the sources of our prosperity, all the securities of our comfort, all that which our ancestors and we have to this day, defended from foreign and domestic enemies for so many centuries; but this is not all, for our misfortunes would not end here, we should also have the inexpressible mortification to submit to a foreign yoke, to wear the chains with which our enemies would shackle us, and to receive the law from the French; to be, in short, the victim of an enemy over whom we have so often triumphed, who by throwing off all restraints of Religion, Order and Government, has in a manner annihilated every moral and social tie which should link society together. To be subjected to an enemy of this description, and to have our liberties and property decided on by their revolutionary Tribunals, to be degraded to such a despicable situation, and after all, to be obliged to bear the most insufferable insult of being told, that they brought us liberty and independence.

FROM these reflections it is evident, that at this awful crisis, it is the true interest of every subject in the British dominions, to assist his Country by liberal contributions, which will enable us to baffle the malignant designs of our inveterate enemies, to alleviate, in a great measure, the burthens which must otherwise fall on posterity, and will increase the value of our property in the Public Funds. It is not necessary to mention all the numerous advantages we shall gain, by a spirited resistance of the determined enemies of all order and good government.

The Names of the Nobility, Gentry, and Others, who contributed to the Defence of this Country at the Time of the Spanish Invasion in 1558.
